Several works were gifted to the museum on the specific occasion of its 35th anniversary, including a triptych by Joan Mitchell, a large-scale installation by Leonardo Drew, and a photographic work by Akram Zaatari. The exhibition demonstrates PAMM's dedication to celebrating Miami's diverse community, featuring works by artists with a special connection to Miami such as José Bedia, who currently lives and works in the city.

Founded in 1984, PAMM first became a collecting institution ten years later. 1994 marked a moment of change and a tumultuous reevaluation of the canon, as demands for multiculturalism and globalism grew incredibly pronounced. PAMM has always strived as an institution to be at the forefront of acknowledging cultural shifts in Miami and beyond, set on showcasing plural narratives and concurrent art historical developments. Since that period, the museum has continued to champion artists representing different backgrounds and art historical narratives. The upcoming exhibition arranges works that are important to PAMM and demonstrate its history together in new contexts, considering not only the influential relationships between seminal artists of the last century, but also the momentous gifts that changed the face of the museum's collection.

The Gift of Art is organized by PAMM Chief Curator Tobias Ostrander.
